Your Return

Alterna calculates return by taking the starting index level: Prior to the issue date, we determine the starting value of the index - this is usually a week before the issue date. We take the average of the 3 closing levels and use this in the final calculation. The final return will be the difference between the average closing levels and the starting index levels.

Your return is based on the performance of twenty global securities representing economic sectors in the developed countries. The exact formulas are as follows:

$$\text{Interest} = \text{Principal} \times \text{Cumulative return} \times 100\%$$

$$\text{Cumulative return} = \left[\left(\frac{CP^2 \text{ for } S_1}{CP^1} + \frac{CP^2 \text{ for } S_2}{CP^1} + \ldots \frac{CP^2 \text{ for } S_{20}}{CP^1}\right) \times \frac{1}{20}\right] - 1$$

Definitions

Principal	=	The amount of the Initial Deposit
CP^2	=	Prior to the maturity date, we determine the closing values of the index on 3 specific days - usually 60, 30 and 5 days prior to maturity. We take the average of the 3 closing levels and use this in the final calculation
CP^1	=	The price of each security at closing, typically one week before issue date (or the following business day if no reading takes place on this security on this date).
S_1 to S_{20}	=	Each one of the twenty (20) securities.
100 %	=	The rate of participation in the growth of the basket of securities.
